The Little Red Hen

The little red hen found some grains of wheat in the barn yard.

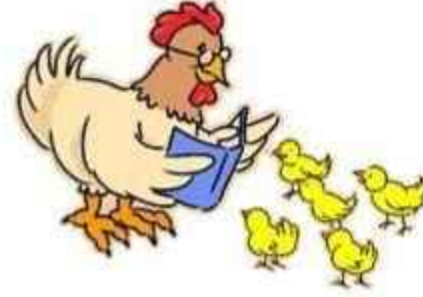

"Who will help me plant the wheat?" She asked.

"I will not," said the cat.

"I will not," said the pig.

"I will not," said the duck.

"Then I will do it myself," said the little red hen. And she did.

After the hen planted the wheat, it needed some water.

"Who will help me water the wheat?" She asked.

"I will not," said the cat.

"I will not," said the pig.

"I will not," said the duck.

"Then I will do it myself," said the little red hen. And she did.

Soon the wheat grew tall and was ready to be cut.

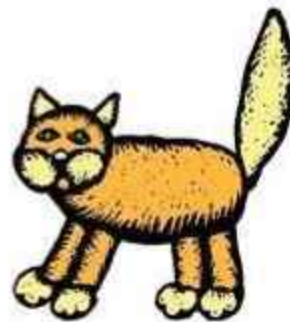

"Who will help me cut the wheat?" She asked.

"I will not," said the cat.

"I will not," said the pig.

"I will not," said the duck.

"Then I will do it myself," said the little red hen. And she did.

After the wheat was cut, the little red hen asked, "Who will help me take this wheat to the mill?"
